

To whom this may concern,

I am sending you a comment on the notice that I have recieved regarding the Consumer Bankers Association (CBA) challenge to Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law. I am currently enrolled in the Indiana "do not call" program, and would like it known that I am against the CBA challenge to impose a federal "established business relationship" exemption on Indiana residents.

The exemption they are seeking is exactly what the Indiana Privacy Law was enacted to prevent. I enrolled because I did not want ANY phone solicitations, and I believe I am in the majority of Indiana residents that feel that way. The Indiana Privacy Act is a VOLUNTARY program which I may exclude myself from at any time. Why should the CBA be given an exemption to something that I expressly signed up for?

Please tell the CBA that their challenge is baseless, as the Indiana residents have Voluntarily signed up for this program to avoid telephone solicitations.

Thank you,

Dan Fitzsimons
Indiana Resident.
